

BLOG

OUTLINE

Title
Holidays are here again!	Start with an attention grabbing title
Opening
Well, I expect you all know that I've been looking forward to my holiday for weeks and now here I am in sunny Tokyo. I louched down last night and hit the hay pretty much straight away because my jetlag was getting the better of me. But now I'm fully rested and raring to go .	Use a lighthearted tone to begin that introduces the main event you want to talk about straight away. Perhaps refer to previous blog posts or knowledge you think your reader already has ("I expect you all know that...")
Main Body
This morning I got up ridiculously early to have a sushi breakfast. You might think that's pretty extravagant (and yes, I wasn't keen on the idea myself at first) but it was wonderful! There's nothing like raw fish to get the day off to a good start, especially the kind that's made right in front of you and arranged on your plate like a Roman mosaic of colour. But I still couldn't resist washing it down with a cup of Starbucks coffee – I know I'm in Japan, but I still need some home comforts, don't I? After breakfast I trundled down to Ginza, which is a shopper's paradise. There are department stores on every corner and all the swankiest Japanese go there to buy the trendiest clothes and gadgets. It was heaven! (I didn't buy anything, of course, as my student budget wouldn't allow it...but it was sure worth a look.) What's next on the agenda, then? Well, for starters I can't go home until I've tried unagi don, which is cooked eel on a bed of rice. Delicious! Oh, and I've just got to take a look round Akihabara—that's the district of Tokyo where all the otakus ("computer geeks") hang out and spend their days playing retro computer games. Cool, eh? I personally want to resurrect my skills on the Sega Mega Drive!	Use a new paragraph for each point, supporting it with appropriate examples, e.g.: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• I had a sushi breakfast</li><li>• I went shopping in a fashionable area of Tokyo</li><li>• I plan to go to Akihabara and play computer games</li></ul>
Ending
Anyway, I've got to go and explore this fascinating city. I hope the rest of my time here is going to be as exciting as my first day. I'll keep you posted on my blog, of course!	Finish in a friendly way and invite your reader to follow your next blog entry.